Shay's Express Wagon Whirled

Through Town at a Rapid Gait. The team attached to Shay's express wagon ran away yesterday morning at about 11.30 o'clock. It was left standing on Dundaff street near the Hendrick shops and was tied to a weight. It is not known what started the horses but when the driver came out of the shop they were galloping down Dundaff street while the weight was left behind with the strap snapped in two. The team turned into Sixth avenue at the bridge and swerved down Main street at the next corner. In making the turn a whiffletree broke and one of the horses got a front leg over the pole. In this position they could not make rapid progress and several attempts were made to stop them. Jacob Cohen left his junk wagon in front of the Carbondale cash store and ran out in front of the horses. They turned and ran into his wagon smashing the wheel. The horse with his leg over the pole fell and the team was captured. The horses were considerably bruised, but the damage is only skin deep. Other damage is

LAWS OF DIVORCE IN MANY LANDS

VARIOUS REASONS FOR WHICH MARRIAGE BOND IS SEVERED.

Easy for a Man to Put a Girdle of Grass Widows Around the Earth in a Comparatively Brief Time-Trifling Ground for Divorce in Olden Times and Now.

From the Green Bag.

The marriage and divorce laws of the various countries, states and tribes, brought together, compound a dish of statutes as analogous to hash as anything on the legal board. year or two ago a London writer humorously suggested that an interesting plece might be prepared for the stage, entitled, "Round the World's Divorce Courts in Sixty Days." He would have the hero, or shall I say the villain. Don Juan, began his matrimonial adventures in Ireland, take a second wife in Scotland and a third in England. The laws covering his case, lacking uniformity between the three countries, would declare the marriages both legal and illegal. Don Juan would next go to America, where, by reason of the varying laws of the different states, he could marry and divorce, remarry and redivorce, and commit bigamy, trigamy, quadrigamy, etc., until his itinerary called him on to fresh fields and pastures

Over in Japan he could legally shake off a wife who talked too much; in China one who was ill-tempered; in Australia one who imbibed too freely, and in Germany one who was too extravagant: and so be could travel merrily on, until he had actually girdled the earth with divorces and grass widows.

IN ROME.

Divorce was known in Rome as far back as the time of the decemvirs The historian Dionysius has preserved a speech of Veturia, in which she mentions that her son, Coriolanus, before he left Rome, told his wife, Volumnia, that he was no longer to be her husband, and wished her better luck in marrying another more fortunate than himself. This was in the fifth century before Christ.

In ancient Athens the law allowed divorce upon very trifling grounds. In Crete any man might dismiss a wife who promised to hamper him with a too numerous progeny. The Greek wife of today, if she would remain a wife, must conduct herself with the greatest propriety. The husband may btain a divorce from her if, against his wish, she should stay a night in another house; if, without his knowledge, she should go to the theater or the races; or if, against his desire, she attends a dinner or goes in bathing in the company of men.

The divorce procedure of the ancient Hebrews, judging from the case of Abraham and his wife, Hagar, was a very simple matter indeed. "And Abraham rose up early in the morning and took bread and a bottle of water and gave it to Hagar, putting it on her shoulder, and the child, and sent here away. In early Russian times divorce was brought about in this way: The couple who wished to be separated simply proceeded to a public square, and, each taking hold of one of the ends of a strip of brittle muslin, they pulled it apart in the presence of the townstual desire to part company.

It is not only in Japan that a husband may divorce his wife if she should be too talkative. The Chinese ourts allow divorce for loquacity, inattention to her parents-in-law, thievishness, ill temper, lasciviousness and barrenness. The man who puts away his wife for any other cause is to be punished with eighty blows.

IN CHINA. The ancient Chinese were much more liberal in their divorce laws. It is recorded in one of their old books that 'a wife was turned away if she allowed the house to be full of smoke, or f she frightened the dog with her disagreeable noise," by which it would appear that those old rat eaters thought more of their dogs than they did of their wives. Probably the dogs secured for them their favorite rodentian fare.

In Morocco a man may leave his wife on the slightest provocation and marry again. De Church writes: "One of the servants here is reported to have had nineteen wives already, though he is still middle-aged." Another writer says that among the Moors it is considered "low" for a couple to live too long together, and the leaders of fashion are those who have been the oftenest di-

Pollak tells us that in Persia a 'Sighe" wife is taken in marriage for legally stipulated period, which may be of any length from one hour to ninety-nine years. In Greenland husband and wife are allowed to separate after living together for six months. The Maldivians are so fond of matrimonial change that cases are frequent where a man marries and divorces the same woman three or four times, In France, in 1792, during the reign of terror, the National Convention tried the experiment of allowing divorce at the free will of the parties concerned. The result was shocking. During the twenty-seven months immediately following the enactment of the new law no less than 6,000 divorces took place in Paris alone, and the matter grew steadily worse until in 1797 the divorces actually outnumbered the marriages. In 1798 the act was amended. Writing of this period, the historian Duval says: "Couples divorced for a 'yes' or a 'no'; they divorced under the least provocation without any more ado than they would have to go and gather lilacs in the meadows of St. Gervals, or to eat cherries at

IN EARLY NEW ENGLAND. Judge Cowley tells us that the first ict under which marriage could be dissolved by judicial degree in any de-pendency of the English crown was passed by the general court of Massa-chusetts in 1639. The new "Court of Assistants" appointed by that act did not have long to wait before exercising its new prerogative, for at its first meeting this case was decided: James Luxford being presented for having two wives, his last marriage

after the lecture."

In almost all the states of our Union divorces may be obtained for cruel and inhuman treatment. It is interesting to see what has sometimes been so considered. In one case a court granted a divorce to a wife because her husband would not wash himself. In a second case it was allowed the plaintiff because the defendant had said to her, after they had been married twenty-seven years: "You are old and worn out; I do not want you any more,' In another instance a woman who was subject to sick headaches, which grew worse when she smelled tobacco, was allowed a divorce because her husband smoked. The amusing pleawas made by another woman that her husband would never cut his toenails, and so every night she was severely scratched.

A fifth instance is where a woman secured a divorce because her little man insisted on quoting to her passages of Scripture and reminding her in the language of the Apostle Paul that she should be obedient to her hus-

Some years ago a Kentucky victim of man's inconsistency set forth her plaint in a petition for divorce in this style

"Dark clouds of discord began to lower over the sky of wedded felicity. and the minacious lightning of disunion began to dart its lurid flames across the gloomy clouds of atramental blackness, obscuring every star of hope and happiness whose resplendent glory illuminated the dawn of the first few brief years of her wedded life, when she gave her hand and an undivided heart to the defendant, who in the sultry month of July, 1876, after having been warmly and snugly wintered within the fond embraces of her loving arms and closely nestled to a heart that beat alone for the defend-ant, showed his base black ingratitude abandoning her without cause whatever, except the insatiable thirst for novelty, which is the predominant character of the defendant's nature." If the deserted one was in the habit f holding out in this style the wonder that the union lasted as long as it

WOES OF HUSBANDS. But complaints of cruel and inhuman reatment are not the exclusive priviege of the weaker sex. Husbands have made their share of them. One man claimed a divorce on the ground that his wife was in the habit of pulling him out of bed by his whiskers; another because his wife did not sew on his buttons. A third wanted freedom because his wife gave him a violent blow over the head with her bustle; and yet another because his wife's rothers used to come to his house and threaten to thrash him, and make him do everything she wanted him to do, It is only a few months ago that William Schineckebier, of Chicago, applied to the courts for freedom from a wife who had set up for his observing up of the Merrimac in the James by our own officers, without a fight, and there being caught in such a trap, I determined, by an unexpected dash into the fleet, to attack and do it all the damage in my power; to expend all my ammunition and what little coal had on board (only six hours' steaming), and then, having done all I could with what resources I had, to retire under the guns of the fort, and, being without motive power, there to lie and assist in repulsing the attacks and assaults on the fort."

FAMOUS SEA FIGHT

The unexpectedness of the second attack is well illustrated by Admiral Farragut's remark at the time. After having anchored, all hands were piped to brakfast, when the officer on duty on the deck of the Hartford, seeing the ram slowly heading up the bay for the Federal fleet, reported the fact to Admiral Farragut while he was taking breakfast, "What! Is that so?" he inquired. Just like Buchanan's audacity! Sigial to all frigates to get under way immediately and run the ram under

The greatest injury done to the Ten-nessee was by the Chickasaw, comnanded by Captain G. H. Perkins, Our pilot, in pointing it out to Captain Johnson, said: "That ironclad is hanging to us like a dog and has smashed our shield already. Fight him! Sink him if you can!" The Chickasaw really captured the Tennessee, The Conferedate torpedoes, planted at the entrance to Mobile Bay, were the first of the kind and were very primitive in their construction, merely a large beer keg filled with powder and anchored by chains to a big, flat piece of iron called a "mushroom." Projecting from the swinging top, some four feet under water, were tubes of glass filled with sulphuric acid, causing rapid chemical combustion and finally a mass of fire, thus exploding the powder. They had been planted so long that many leaked, only one out of ten remaining intact, and this fact explains why so many were run over by the Federal fleet without exploding.

During the four months that we were guarding the entrance to Mobile Bay we were not by any means safe from the danger of our own contrivances. One hot July morning we officers were upon the first deck of the ram enjoy ng the sea breezes, when a floating black object was observed bobbing up and down. We supposed at first that it was a sort of devil fish with its young as we had killed one with its "calf" only a few weeks previously, but the motion was too slow, evidently, elescope soon revealed the fact that it was a torpedo drifting in with the flood tide. We could not send a boat crew after it to tow it out of the way. We could not touch it, we could not guide it. There was no means in our power to divert it from its course. Finally, at the suggestion of Captain David Eainy of the marines, he brought up his whole guard with loaded muskets, who at once began to shoot at the floating keg. We sunk it not a moment too soon, for it only disappeared under the water abount twenty feet from the ram.

The wound received by Admiral Buchanan was from a fragment of ron, either a piece of solid shot or part of the plating of the ram, which fractured the large bone of the leg. The dmiral's aides were Lieuts. and Forrest. They tenderly nursed him during the entire four months of his confinement in the hospital at Pensa cola, accompanied him to Fort Warren cared for him while here, and brought him back to Richmond after his exchange. Carter is now a well-known citizen of North Carolina. Forrest until ten years ago lived in Virginia.
